Pihl Brothers Building

101 S Meridian

Local Historic Register

Constructed in 1911, the Pihl Brothers Building is a great example of the low-scale masonry buildings that make up the commercial core of downtown Puyallup. The Pihl Brothers operated a general store, grocery, and feed store in the building until the 1920's, when it was bought by John H. Pohlman. In 1926 the building underwent renovation and then housed the Pohlman's variety store until his death in the mid-1950's.

Karshner Building

124 S Meridian

Local Historic Register

The Karshner Building was constructed for Warner Karshner, a prominent Puyallup citizen and doctor, who also acted as the city's Health Officer. In 1942, Karshner sold the building to Stretor H. Beall. The Karshner building is part of the commercial core and was added to the local register in 2000.

Peace Lutheran Church

214 E Pioneer

State Historic Register

This building was constructed in 1892 as a Unitarian Church, and in 1990 was transferred to the Peace congregation trustees and became the Peace Lutheran Church. As the oldest church facility in Puyallup it is also home to one of the oldest, continuously worshipping religious bodies in the community.
